

A 1776 map showing the Willing wharf on Penn Street, a short street to the east of Front Street that ran from Pine Street south to Almond Street. It doesn't exist now; it was buried by the construction of I-95 and/or Columbus Boulevard. The location of the Willing wharf today would be just north of the end of Lombard, near Penn's Landing.

A 1770 survey also shows the Willing property in that area:
